SOME QUAINTE ENGLISH.

Portuguese Idea of the Language Is a Book of "Learning."

A book as amusing as it is rare is in the library of a Wissahickon student. The work is called "O Nova Guia da Conversaçao." It is supposed to instruct the Portuguese in English conversation, and the following, a dialogue headed "For to Itide a Horse," is the kind of English conversation it supplies:

"Here is a horse who have a bad looks. Give me another; I will not that. He not all know to march, he is pursey, he is fondered. Don't you are ashamed to give me a jade as like? He is undashed, he is with nails up; it want to lead to the farrier."

An anecdote in the book is:

"A day came a man to consult this philosopher for to know at o'clock it was one to eat. If thou art rich, told him eat when you shall wish; if you are poor, when you may do."

In the preface the most elegant paragraph is the following:

"We expect then, who the little book (for the care what we wrote him, and for her typographical correction) that may be worth the acceptance of the studious persons, and especially of the youth, at which we dedicate him particularly."

The authors of this strange volume are Jose da Fonseca and Pedro Carvalho. It would be interesting to know where Pedro and Jose "learned" English.—Philadelphia Record.

Satisfied His Curiosity.

The curiosity of the natives of wild countries as to everything belonging to the traveler often leads to amusing situations. Mr. J. W. Wells tells in "Three Thousand Miles Through Brazil" of his visit to one settlement where the only shopkeeper of the place proved very inquisitive. He was a frequent visitor and would carefully examine the few belongings of the traveler. His curiosity was finally punished in a very funny manner.

On one of his visits, writes Mr. Wells, he found my bottle of spirits of ammonia on the table, and, seeing it was something he had not hitherto inspected, he naturally laid hold of it and asked of me, "What is this?"

"Only a medicine," I replied, and with a perhaps unworthy satisfaction I watched him hold it up to the light, look at it all round and finally remove the glass stopper and then take a good sniff.

I had to rush forward to save my precious ammonia, as he staggered and gasped for breath and ejaculated, "I'm dying!" By dint of much slapping of his back and dousing of cold water he quickly recovered, but nevermore did he touch any of my things.

After Dinner Oratory.

The fake humorous speaker has an easier career than even the fake eloquent speaker. Yet at any given dinner the orator who passes out mere eloquence to his hearers has a success almost as instant and splendid as his clowning brother. It is amazing what things people will applaud when they have the courage of each other's ineptitude. They will listen after dinner to anything but reason. They prefer also the old speaker to new ones; they like the familiar taps of humor, of eloquence. If they have tasted the brew before, they know what they are going to get. The note of their mood is tolerance, but tolerance of the accustomed, the expected; not tolerance of the novel, the surprising. They wish to be at rest, and what taxes their minds most is their intellectual repose. They do not wish to climb any great heights to reach the level of the orator.—W. D. Howells in Harper's.

A Queer Relic.

In University college, London, is a singular object that is preserved carefully in a remote gallery inside a glass case, which again is contained in a huge wooden cupboard, the doors of which are locked and the keys in safe custody. The relic which is thus so zealously guarded is described in some notes on the history of the college as the "skeleton" of Jeremy Bentham, "clad in the garments in which he lived," while his head only is stated to have been "mummified." It has always been understood that Bentham's body was embalmed, and in that case it cannot be his mere skeleton which is reposing there under lock and key.

Pat Balanced It.

An Irish soldier attending school, which is compulsory when starting till after an examination has taken place, had great difficulty in bringing a sum to the correct answer.

"You are a shilling out, Magee," said the Inspector, "therefore you have failed again."

"Och," said Pat, taking a shilling from his pocket, "take this, and it'll make the sum right. Hurrool Succeed ed at last!"—Spare Moments.

Making It Easy.

"You never allow yourself to read a book until you have read a review of it? Why is that?"

"Well, I prefer to use only predigest ed mental food."

A Case of Interpretation.

"What shall we do with the prisoner?" demanded the spokesman of the mob. "Do thou, O royal chamberlain, hast to the presence of his majesty and learn his wish."

The royal chamberlain hurried to the presence and bowed himself thrice to the floor, then he asked the monarch's pleasure regarding the desperate outlaw.

"Away with him!" said the king in a loud, harsh voice.

But the chamberlain was something of a humorist, and when he returned to the mob he laughingly announced that in regard to the misdoings with the prisoner the king had said only that it was "a way with him."

Whereupon the mob reluctantly released their quarry.

But in trying to explain the joke to the obtuse king the royal chamberlain became confused and completely lost his head.—Baltimore American.

Color of Judas' Hair.

In very early times all pictures of Judas were shown with great shocks of red hair falling down well on the shoulders. This and the fact that the Judas in the "Miracle Plays" was provided with a red hirsute worked the superstitious people of the middle ages up to such a degree that it was actually unsafe for a red haired person to appear in company. Seeing that things were coming to a serious pass, writers of all classes began to rebuke and denounce "the senseless prejudice against those of lively colored hair." Cyrano de Bergerac in his "States and Empires of the Sun" boldly praised and glorified the despised color in the following words: "A brave head covered with red hair is nothing else but the sun in the midst of his rays, yet many speak ill of it because few have the honor to be so."

Some Examples of "Nerve."

In a recent big libel case the foreman of the jury received a letter from a publican, apparently otherwise sane, asking him to insure that the jury should find for the defendant because he had a heavy bet on the result, and this astonishing epistle was read in court. It is interesting to note that the writer lost his bet anyhow. Equally bland was the request once made to Mr. Baileys during his premiership to have dismissed from the commission of the peace a justice who had very properly sentenced the author of the request, a notorious ruffian, to a stiff term of imprisonment for sending beggling letters.—London Answers.

Slamsey Reporting.

Slamsey reporters are not quite so deft as our own specimens, says the London Globe, but they have a fine impressionistic touch which charms the jaded fancy. Here is an account of a murder from that happy land:

"Shooting outrage! Oh, fearful agony! Khoon Tong, one of Phya Song's staff, was on a mission to Lumpoon, and on his return instantly shot dead by some miscreants, scoundrels. Oh, untimely death! Oh, fearful! All friends expressed their morne. The cowardice dog is still at large. Six soldiers and six policemen were at once dispatched."

He Caught Him.

Slick (to Blossom)—Is this Mr. Bloom's office?

Blossom—No. His office is across the hall.

Slick (leaving the door open as he walks out)—Thank you, sir.

Blossom—Hi! Come back and close that door. Have't you any doors in your house?

Slick—Yes, sir, but they all have springs on 'em. Allow me to show you, sir, my patient double back action door spring. It closes without a bang and is warranted to last a lifetime.

Professor Was Noting Things.

"Wasn't it a terrifying experience," asked his friend, "when you lost your foothold and went sliding down the mountain side?"

"It was exciting, but extremely interesting," said the college professor. "I could not help noticing all the way down with what absolute accuracy I was following along the line of least resistance."—Chicago Tribune.

No Better Oz.

"Poor Robinson! He couldn't make a living and married a woman with money."

"But isn't he all right now?"

"Hardly. She is so close with it that he has to work harder than ever."—Life.

But They Help Not a Little.

"Of course, clothes don't make the man."

"Certainly not."

"At the same time, if you have a new suit you'd better put it on when you go out to ask for credit."

Getting Even.

Mrs. von Blumer—We must have the Biggs to dinner. We owe them one. Von Blumer—Of course. We passed an awful dull evening there, and it is nothing more than right that they should pass one here.—Brooklyn Life.

OWEN MEREDITH.

A Dinner Speech of His That Elicited Howls of Derision.

I once sat at a banquet given in London by Wilson Barrett to Lawrence Barrett, a writer in an English magazine. Earl Lytton presided, a curled, oiled, effeminate, supercilious fop. He had a Roman tragedy to sell to Wilson Barrett. That was why he came.

He eulogized Wilson Barrett in a speech. "I believe," he said, "that Mr. Barrett won some success with a piece called (consulting his notes) 'The Lights of London.' I suppose it was the work of some dramatic hack." George Sims sat facing him and never said a word.

Then his lordship went drawing on: "I next find on the list of Mr. Barrett's successes something called 'The Silver King.' Here again I know nothing of the authorship. The names of those dramatic carpenters do not interest me." At which Henry Arthur Jones glared and a flush came into the face of poor blind Henry Herman.

"Finally," said Lord Lytton, "Mr. Wilson Barrett has placed on his boards what he humorously calls a Roman tragedy. I refer to 'Claudian,' attributed to one W. G. Willis, of whom I have never heard." This was too much for the banqueters. All of them were personally acquainted with Irving's poet poet, the modest Willis. So they howled derisively.

And Earl Lytton's tragedy, produced a month later, was a dismal failure.

Superstition About Cats.

In the Monferrato it is believed that all the cats who wander about upon the roofs during the month of February are really witches, whom it is lawful and even necessary to shoot. A German superstition has it that if a black cat sits upon the bed of a sick man it is a presage of his death, while if after his decease it is seen upon his grave it is enough to arouse doubts as to the locality to which his soul has departed. In Hungary it is thought that cats generally become witches between the ages of seven and twelve years. A French belief concerning the cat is that if the animal be carried in a cart and the wind blow from it to the horses they immediately fall tired. If any part of the horseman's clothing be made of cat's skin, the horse will feel as though it carried a double burden. In other countries, however, superstition is favorable rather than adverse to the cat. A variant of the famous story of the Kilkenny cats is found in Piedmont, the cats being, however, replaced by wolves.

Life Saving Devices.

Mimicry among butterflies, moths and other insects would be comic were it not a matter of life or death. Not a few moths have at the hinder ends of their wings a black mark and two or more tails resembling the horns of their own heads. A veteran in warfare not seldom has these portions missing, a proof of the value in having saved his life. Thus the lizard's brittle tail, which, first attracting the enemy, comes off at his touch, lets him would be prey escape. When at bay, crabs distract the enemy by throwing off their claws, and lobsters do the trick more neatly by seizing the enemy with a claw and then throwing off limb and enemy. Thus the husky tail of the squirrel is accounted for. There is a chance of escaping the enemy minus only moulting of fur.

The Missionary Apple Tree.

In the rectory garden of Pysford, near Woking, England, there stands what is familiarly known as the missionary apple tree. The tree is a large one and of a good age and has been so named for the reason that for many years past it has been the custom of the rector of the parish to collect the fruit, sell it in the best market and devote the proceeds to the missionary societies of the Church of England. Quite a large sum of money has been raised in this way, and the apples, which are of the Blenheim orange variety, always find a ready sale at excellent prices among the gentry and farmers of the district.

African Natives and Salt.

To obtain salt the Bakalulua and other African natives burn banana leaves and certain grasses and, collecting the ashes, place them in a large funnel ingeniously made from large banana leaves. Through this they percolate water and then evaporate the filtered water by boiling, obtaining a fairly white salt composed of a very small amount of chloride of sodium and a very large amount of chloride of potash and other salts. Prior to the advent of the traders and the missionaries this was the only salt they had to satisfy the natural craving of a vegetable eating people.

All or None.

Busy Merchant—Well, sir, what do you want?

Timid Youth—Your daughter's hand.

Busy Merchant—Can't give it to you, sir. Either take her entire or leave her.

We are not doing an installment business.—Chicago News.

Elsie Wiggins and Miss Nettie Jones, of Shannon, were married Thursday by Judge Newell.

INACTIVE OLD AGE.

More Conducive to Dreariness Than to Shortening Life.

There is far more evidence for the belief in the dreariness of old age after active work has been laid aside than for the shortening of life which results from the enforced inactivity. Two notable instances and perhaps freer from doubt than most as to whether it is enough alone that kills and not the disease of old age or a more specific malady are those of Napoleon the Great and Bismarck. The one lived six years in St. Helena, the other eight years at Friedrichsruh, each "eating out his heart." If ever there were men who ought on the supposition to have been killed by the total suspension of their activities, these two ought to have been, but it would be extremely difficult to show that they were. Though Napoleon was no more than fifty-three, yet it was the specific disease of cancer of the stomach of which he died, and the connection between his exiled loneliness and the direct cause of his death does not seem very apparent. On the other hand, Bismarck at the age of seventy-five, when he was dismissed from the chancellorship, could not have had a likelihood of more prolonged years than he actually achieved out of office even if he had continued in office until the end. A wise man if not too dyspeptic will never lose touch with actual life. There are old men with young hearts, and the elder when he has a young heart is perhaps the most delightful type humanity can show us.—Saturday Review.

Freak of a Thunderbolt.

The annals of a French academy of science tell of a tailor's adventure with a thunderbolt. He lived in a house provided with two chimneys—one for a fireplace and the other for a stove, the latter not in use. During a thunder-storm a tremendous report was heard, and everybody thought that the house had been struck by lightning. Instantly blue flaming ball dropped into the fireplace and rolled out into the room, scorching about six inches above the floor. The excited tailor ran around the room, the ball of fire playing about his feet. Suddenly it rose above his head and moved off toward the stovepipe hole in the ceiling, which had a piece of paper pasted over it. The ball passed straight through the paper and up the chimney. When near the top, it exploded and tore the chimney into thousands of fragments. The sight of the debris left by the explosion showed the family what would have been the consequences had it exploded while on its gyrating passage through the room.

Learn From the Animals.

Learn o. the animals. The horse teaches us to be silent under punishment and patient in suffering. From the cat we learn to prowl at night. From the dog we learn how to be faithful to a friend. The camel teaches us abstinen ce. The elephant teaches us how to be calm in adversity. The hippopotamus teaches us repose. The shy little rabbit teaches us how to die without a murmur. The antelope teaches us the foolishness of idle curiosity. The toad teaches us the evils of gluttony. The ant teaches us industry and wisdom in council. The hen teaches us to go in out of the wet (yet I have seen fool hens which did not know the difference between sunshine and rain). Some men might learn of hogs how to be gentlemen.—New York Press.

Fully Qualified.

The story is told of a man who by some unaccountable blunder by the appointing authority was made judge of a minor court.

He could neither read nor write, but that did not give him any uneasiness, although it aroused some fears in the breast of his wife.

"What are you going to do when there's any reading or writing comes into cases?" she timidly inquired.

"The folks that bring the readin' will read it, and the folks that want the writin' will write it," calmly replied his honor, "or if they can't i shall consult 'em. All i've got to attend to. Hit-ty, is the judgin', and i can do that as quick as anybody."

The Worship of the Moon.

The Moslem still slaps his hands at the sight of the new moon and mutters a prayer, although the Koran appears to forbid the practice in the words, "Bend not in adoration of the sun or moon." Herodotus accuses the ancient Persians of being moon worshippers, and, though they denied the practice, the following passage from the Zend Avesta would seem to be conclusive: "We sacrifice to the new moon, the holy and master of holiness; we sacrifice to the full moon, the holy and master of holiness."

Weather a Dangerous Topic.

Newitt—Well, there's one thing about the weather—it's always a safe topic of conversation.

Broughous—I thought it was today when I met Lendham, but when I started to speak of it he said, "Yes, it's unsettled, and that reminds me of that note of yours."—Philadelphia Press.

GOV. BECKHAM has announced that he will not engage in joint discussions with his opponents in the pending gubernatorial campaign. In a letter declining an invitation to divide time with Judge Becklinridge at Frankfort, the Governor says it is his purpose to win if possible without disparaging the claims of his opponents and that he believes joint debates are hurtful to the party, unnecessary and unwise. Governor Beckham takes the correct view of the situation, and his course will be commended.

FLEMING CASE REVERSED.

Action of Appellate Court in Suit to Settle the Meshack Story Estate.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 27.—The Court of Appeals, in an opinion of Judge Nunn, reversed the Fleming Circuit Court in the case of Ben Story, &c. vs. the First National Bank of Louisville, &c. The action involved a settlement of the estate of Meshack Story. The action grew out of the filing of a suit by his executor for the purpose of settling the estate making the heirs and many of the creditors, including the First National Bank of Louisville and Louisville Banking Company, defendants.

The defendants filed separate answers, making them their cross-petition against the executor. The executor filed separate answers and cross-petitions and plead non est factum, and no consideration to each and all the notes set up. The lower court directed an issue out of chancery.

The court, upon motion of appellees, gave the jury peremptory instruction to find for them, and judgment was rendered. This court discusses the provisions of the code relating to requiring proving of signatures, etc., to the court, and holds it was error in the lower court in giving peremptory instructions, and directs a new trial.

Building of a Colored School in East End of City Being Considered—Non-Resident Pupils Must Pay.

At the meeting of the Board of Education last evening President Sallee was authorized to appoint a committee to investigate lots suitable for a site for a colored school somewhere near the division line between the Fifth and Sixth wards, ascertain probable cost of a two-room building and report at next meeting.

The claim was made that a number of non-resident pupils are attending the city schools without paying tuition, and a motion was adopted requiring all teachers to report a list of non-resident children in their rooms to the Secretary of the Board, who was directed to collect the tuition due from such pupils.

ENTHUSIASTIC.

The Movement For Fine Exhibit of the States' Resources Rapidly Maturing. Mason County Should Do Her Part.

Judge Wall returned from Louisville Thursday. He reports a very enthusiastic meeting of the friends of the Kentucky exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis. Abundant space has been granted Kentucky, and the exhibit of "Mason County leaf" is to be the feature of Kentucky's contribution.

The Louisville tobacco men spoke in high praise of our tobacco fair, and of our cordial and clever people, being specially complimentary of President Duley and his very able assistant, Col. Hal Curran.

Our county will never have a better chance to advertise its fertility of soil, and wealth of agricultural products and fine stock, and the only way to gain full advantage of this occasion is for every corporation, industry and individual in the county to contribute something to the general fund. Judge Wall has been authorized by the Financial Committee to receive funds from any and all sources, and assures us that Mason County will receive full benefit for every dollar donated. Every section of the State was represented and many contributions reported at the Louisville meeting.

The Board of Trade and all of our citizens should take a lively interest in this matter.

It is by far the strongest flow of gas yet struck in the oil fields of that region.

Good For Bad Boys

Seems a fitting title for a shoe that gives absolutely satisfactory service and stands a long season of the wear and tear most "strenuous" youngsters put into them.

"GOOD FOR BAD BOYS" Shoes are made of solid leather throughout—no lining to wear and wrinkle over the toes. They are built by a factory that make a specialty of and know the requirements of Boys' Shoes, and sold in Maysville exclusively at

BARKLEY'S

A Venerable Sage...

Whose advice was much sought, being noted for his sound judgment and business prudence, once counseled a young merchant in this fashion:

"If you want to be noticed you must get
"In front of folks and worry 'em some."

We've been trying very hard to make this bit of philosophy fit our own case, and, through these advertisements, believe we have succeeded in attracting a generous measure of patronage to our house. We don't want to "worry" you too much with a recital of these facts, but expect you to notice that we stand in "front" of all competition in our line in Northeastern Kentucky. Trade invited in these seasonables:

Ball, Limestone and Oliver Chilled Plows and Points,
Hoes, Rakes, Forks, Spades, Mattocks, Cutting Boxes, Wheelbarrows,

The relatives and friends of R. M. Wells were very much surprised at the announcement in the BULLETIN of his marriage at Birmingham, Ala. An Athens (Ala.) paper has this to say: "News was received in Athens late Tuesday afternoon of the marriage of Miss Sadie Coffee to Mr. Richard M. Wells, of Birmingham. The marriage was a thorough surprise to the family and friends of Miss Sadie, as no intimation was had that she and Mr. Wells expected to consummate their vows at this time. Misses Sadie and Mary Coffee had been visiting the family of Dr. I. D.

Steele in Birmingham for several days, and it seems that Miss Coffee and Mr. Wells decided to wed at once. Mr. Wells is the Birmingham agent for the Lexington, Ky., Roller Mills, and is a splendid young business man. He stands high in Birmingham business circles. He visited Athens last summer when he met Miss Coffee, forming a friendship which soon ripened into love. He is to be congratulated on winning so fair a bride. The bride has been a popular member of Athens society for the past two or three years, and has many warm friends and admirers in the place of her nativity who will extend their heartiest best wishes to her."

It is worth considerable to any citizen of Maysville to know how to be cured of painful annoying and itching piles. Know then that Doan's Ointment is a positive remedy for all itchiness of the skin, for piles, eczema, etc. One application relieves and soothes. Read this testimony of its merit:

Mr. J. C. Gabby, of 925 East Second street, says: "For many years I suffered severely from itching hemorrhoids. I bought every remedy I heard of, but do what I might the trouble grew worse instead of better. It was particularly aggravating after I retired and I lost much sleep because of the intense itching. I had the good fortune to learn of Doan's Ointment and I bought a box at J. Jas. Wood & Son's drug store. The wonderful relief I obtained from its use was almost beyond belief. I soon felt that I was cured. I continued the treatment for a time, however, to make assurance doubly sure."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.
